“ My first memory of Danny is when I was just five or six years old. He was my first cousin, and unlike my brother who tried to ignore me, he, being a teenager took time to play with me at our grandparents house! One day he ask if I knew how to make baskets out of apricot fruits. I had no idea what they were, so he took me to the edge of granddaddy’s yard where some vines grew! There, hanging on the vines, were green fruits about the size of hen eggs! (remember, we had no electronics to entertain us in the early 50’s, and found our own fun!). He proceeded to use his knife to make a little basket out of one of the apricots. I was entranced!! Not only was this tall, handsome guy paying attention to me, but making me baskets!! He proceeded to show me how to make people, and horses withe those amazing green orbs!! He was my hero from that moment on!! We grew older and lost touch, only a few years ago did we get to visit he and Sue at their home. We were both older on the outside, but the same inside. Everyone should have a childhood hero like mine, he was the best!! Praying for all who loved Danny, especially Sue.
