“ Dear JB Crabtree,

Words cannot fully express how difficult it will be not having you at Dialysis anymore. Over time, we became neighbors in this shared experience. I often arrived a little earlier than you, and while waiting, I would sometimes dose off out of boredom, only to wake up when you came in. Our fist bumps and check-ins about how we were doing became a comforting routine. We would engage in conversations about random topics, and inevitably, we both dozed off until my machine signaled it was time for me to leave. If you were still asleep, I wouldn't wake you, but if you were awake, we would share one last fist bump and say, "Catch you on the one." Until we meet again, brother.

“ Jeremy was a great friend and would give you the shirt off his back or his last dollar. My parents and his dad and step mom are neighbors and I have known Jeremy for the 25 years. He will be missed greatly. Until we meet again brother.

Although we hadn't seen each other since we were children, Jeremy was one of the first to offer support when my son was diagnosed with CF.

He was next-level kind, generous, and empathetic. I'm proud to call him family, and inspired by his courage and tenacity. His memory will live on in all who loved him, and all who fight the CF battle.

“ JB was my 2nd cousin through the Crowe family. We started getting close a few years ago. He was so sweet and caring. Such a loving man. Would give you the shirt of his back.

*“On those days
when you miss someone the most as though your memories are sharp enough to slice through skin and bone remember how they loved you.
Remember how they loved you and do that for yourself.
In their name in their honour.
Love yourself as they loved you.
They would like that.
On those days
when you miss someone the most love yourself harder.”
